HARVEST

FALL AG PRODUCTS & SERVICES

Here is your farm safety checklist for harvest

Harvest season is one of the busiest and most rewarding times of the year, but it can also be a dangerous time.

Long hours, tight schedules, moving machinery, dust exposures and unpredictable weather conditions can create situations where incidents can happen quickly. Taking just a few minutes each day to focus on safety will help prevent injuries, equipment damage and costly downtime.

Fatigue is one of the greatest harvest hazards. When you are tired, you are more likely to make mistakes, overlook hazards and have slower reaction times. Scheduling regular breaks, staying hydrated and getting “good” sleep, even if you can’t get adequate sleep, can reduce fatigue.

Simply getting out of your equipment to eat meals can allow you to reset and feel revived.

Keep equipment safe

Machinery safety needs to be a top priority. Before entering the field, inspect equipment for worn belts, damaged shields, hydraulic leaks and faulty lights. Replace safety guards that have been removed, and always shut down equipment and remove the key before performing maintenance or clearing clogged machinery.

Road safety is another concern as farm equipment travels between fields. Ensure slow-moving vehicle emblems are clean and visible, use flashing lights when appropriate, and check that brakes and turn signals function properly. Remind your harvest team to never wave vehicles by and to clearly signal left turns.

Fire prevention is especially important during dry harvest conditions. Clean equipment regularly to remove debris buildup around engines and exhaust systems. Keep a charged fire extinguisher in every machine and vehicle.

Communication is essential for a safe harvest. Your team should know the day’s plan, field locations and emergency procedures. Carry a charged mobile phone or two-way radio and ensure everyone knows how to quickly summon help, if needed. Sharing locations on your phone and maintaining regular check-ins can save valuable time during emergencies.

SAFETY TIPS FOR THE FARM

- Maintain at least a 10-foot distance from power lines when operating equipment like grain augers, elevators and other tall machinery.
- Use a spotter to navigate safely around power lines and other electrical equipment.
- If your equipment makes contact with an energized or downed power line, contact us immediately by phone and remain inside the vehicle until the power line is de-energized. In case of smoke or fire, exit the cab by making a solid jump out of the cab, without touching it at the same time, and hop away to safety.
- Always lower portable augers or elevators to their lowest possible level – under 14 feet – before moving or transporting; use care when raising them.
- Don't attempt to raise or move power lines.
- Report potential power line hazards to the Cooperative.

MAXIMIZING Corn Silage Yield and Quality

Written by Kevin Jarek UW Extension

Corn silage is unique compared to other multicut forage systems, such as alfalfa, as there is only one opportunity to harvest the crop annually. Therefore, farmers, agronomists, and agricultural professionals must dilligently monitor corn silage acres to identify the optimal harvest time to maximize forage yield and quality, as well as to ensure the proper moisture content for ensiling.

Estimating Average Dry Down Per Day

The average corn silage dry down rate in Wisconsin in September is assumed to be 0.5 percent per day. This rate of dry down is impacted by air temperature, wind speed, and relative humidity, as well as the hybrid, crop management, landscape position, and soil type. In dry condtions the daily dry down rate can be as high as 1 percent. The rate of dry down can also be impacted by ear development. Fields experiencing “tip back” or the lack of kernel development at the end of the ear, may dry down more quickly than the average dry down rate per day. In addition, fields with tip back may also be more susceptible to disease development in the unfilled portion of the corn ear and so, these fields should be monitored for disease development ahead of harvest.

Harvest Strategies for Fields with Uneven Moisture Contents

To harvest a field with uneven moisture contents, begin chopping when the majority of plants are at the correct moisture for the storage structure. If uneven plants are randomly scattered within a field, there should be minimal problems with fermentation, as the wetter and drier materials will be adequately mixed.

If a field contains large areas significantly wetter or drier than optimal, potential harvest options are based on row orientation. If a portion of the uneven area will be harvested with each pass of the chopper, mixing should occur and fermentation should continue with minimal problems. However, if the area is orientated to the rows so that the chopper does not move through wet and dry areas with each pass, then the areas should be segregated and harvested separately.

Welcome Dr. Brooklyn Udelhofen

Pregnancy, Babies & Craniosacral Therapy

One of the things we're especially excited to have Dr. Brooklyn bring to Chiropractic Associates is her additional training in care for pregnant moms and babies.

Dr. Brooklyn is officially Webster Certified through the International Chiropractic Pediatric Association (ICPA).

The Webster Technique is a specific chiropractic analysis and adjustment focused on reducing nervous system stress and supporting balance in the pelvis, muscles and ligaments during pregnancy.

Dr. Brooklyn also offers craniosacral therapy (CST) — a gentle hands-on technique that can be especially helpful when working with babies.

CST may be used as part of care for babies experiencing concerns such as:

- Flat spots/plagiocephaly
- Torticollis
- Breastfeeding struggles
- Reflux
- Difficulty sleeping

If pregnancy, postpartum care or infant wellness is something you've been looking for, we're excited to now have another provider in the office with specialized training in these areas.
